Passage II: Items 61-63

I had just come out of a shop when the blast of a car horn scared me. When I turned to yell at the rude driver, I found a large white poodle sitting in the driver's seat of a parked car. When the impatient dog honked again, a man came scurrying out of a shop, shouting, "I'll be there in a minute!"

"Did you teach your dog to do that?" I asked the man.

"Yes," he answered in exasperation, "and now he won't let me go anywhere!"

61. What happened when the writer was in front of the shop?

1. The speedy car nearly hit him.
2. The impolite driver yelled at him.
3. The poodle in the car attacked him.
4. The loud noise from the car frightened him.

62. According to the joke, why did the dog beep?

1. The dog did as was taught
2. The dog played with the horn.
3. The dog was scarred by the crowd.
4. The dog warned his master to hurry up.

1. The dog was left alone in the car.
2. Rude drivers often blew the horn to others.
3. The pet owner and the author reacted the same simultaneously.
4. Dogs are allowed to drive under the supervision of the owners.

Passage VI: Items 64-65

Diabetics are twice as likely as non-diabetics to suffer from depressions, say psychiatrists from Washington University and the US Department of Veterans Affairs in St. Louis, who analysed 25 years of research.

Doctors have long assumed that diabetes--which strikes tens of millions of people--can bring on depression because of the difficulties it causes in the lives of sufferers, says the study's senior author, Patrick Lustman of Washington University. But now, the idea that the reverse could be true--that is, that depression may lead to diabetes--is being seriously considered, says Lustman. One clue may lie in the inactivity and overeating that accompany depression. Each contributes to diabetes.

Diabetics who are depressed should seek treatment for both maladies, the researcher says.

64. According to the passage, what does 'the reverse' refer to?"

1. Depression causes diabetes.
2. Overeating leads to diabetes.
3. Diabetes results from inactivity.
4. Non-diabetics results in depression.

65. Which of the following style does the writer use?

1. Descriptive
2. Narrative
3. Informative
4. Argumentative

Passage IV: (Items 66-70)

One of the people killed in the London bombings was an Afghan who tried to make a new life in Britain after his parents were killed by the Taliban movement in Afghanistan, a newspaper reported yesterday.

Ateeque Sharifi, 24 who died when a suicide bomber blew up a subway train near King's Cross station, was the last of the 56 victims to be formally identified. The Independent newspaper reported.

Three years ago he fled Kabul to London, where he learned English and became a model student. In his spare time, he worked in a pizza takeaway, sending most of his wages home to his younger sister in Afghanistan, the newspaper said.

Thalia Marriott, the principal at West Thames College which he had attended since September 2002, said the college's staff and 7,000 students were deeply shocked and saddened by his death.

"The deep irony of this tragic events is that Ateeque had left Afghanistan to seek safety in the UK, only to find his fate at the hands of extremists here,” Marriott was quoted as saying.

She described him as a “truly inspirational and popular student” who was destined for a bright future.

During a visit to London, President Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan paid tribute to Sharifi by placing flowers among the hundreds of personal tributes piling up in the garden square outside King’s Cross station.

66. What is NOT TRUE about the news?

1. Ateeque Sharifi was an Afghan refugee.
2. Ateeque was an Afghan suicide bomber.
3. Ateeque was killed in London bombings.
4. Ateeque was described as a nice and diligent student.

67. How did Ateeque’s teachers and friends feel about this incident?

- | | |
|----------------|------------------|
| 1. Puzzled | 2. Mournful |
| 3. Indifferent | 4. Disinterested |

68. What was the irony of this event?

1. Ateeque died like other Afghans in the London subway.
2. Ateeque was a model student who worked hard for the militants.
3. Ateeque was killed in the country where he thought he would be safe.
4. Ateeque risked his life in a bomb attack just like those living in Afghanistan.

69. What would be the most appropriate headline of the news?

1. A Young Bomber
2. Unintentional Suicide Bombing
3. Afghan Refugee among Victims
4. Terrified bombing by the Taliban

70. What would be the most suitable saying for this news report?

1. Back to the wall
2. A blessing in disguise
3. Never give up without a fight
4. Out of the frying pan into the fire

Items 71-80: Reading (A Long Passage)

Directions: Choose the best answer.

Sari Zayed of Davis, California, made headlines in 1994 when a city noise enforcement officer issued Zayed a $50 citation at 1:30 in the morning after a neighbor complained her snoring kept him awake at night. Zayed got the last laugh. She sued for $24,500 for stress, weight loss and emotional strain, and settled out of court $13,500.

Snorers aren't trying to keep others awake at night. Most of the time, they don't even know they snore—they are after all, unconscious at the time. Some anthropologists have suggested that snoring is a primitive way of keeping beasts away at night. Ear, nose and throat doctors take a different view.

Doctors take snoring seriously. The most serious form is sleep apnea, in which the sleeper actually stops breathing for periods of at least 10 seconds. Hundreds of times a night. During as much as half their sleep time, patients with sleep apnea may show below-average concentrations of oxygen in their blood. A lack of oxygen can cause the heart to pump harder and over time can contribute to high blood pressure.

During REM sleep, the brain sends out an inhibitor that basically paralyzes the body, presumably to keep you from acting out vivid dreams. When a sleep apnea sufferer's breathing is cut off, the body rouses itself with a jolt of adrenaline. Breathing resumes, the person falls back to sleep and the whole thing starts again. These "micro-arousals" can happen as many as 600 times a night, disrupting a snorer's sleep cycle. Studies have linked their apnea induced sleepiness to an increase in car accidents. A study by the Mayo Clinic also shows that spouses of heavy snorers lose an average of one's hour sleep a night.

People have been trying to develop a snoring cure as far back as the American Revolution when soldiers sewed small cannonballs into pockets on the back of the snorer-offenders' uniforms so they would not roll onto their backs. Today, more than 300 anti-snoring devices are registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

To reduce your nighttime noise making, try losing weight, avoiding alcohol within three hours before you go to sleep and ironically, getting enough sleep. If that doesn't work, consult a physician. There are a number of things they can try, such as breathing masks, mouthpieces and surgery.

71. How much Zayed benefit from her snoring?

- | | |
|-------------|--------------|
| 1. $ 3,450 | 2. $13,500 |
| 3. $ 50 | 4. $ 24,500 |
